New exhibit celebrates Anacortes’ 125th birthday

Ever heard of a sesquicentennial? Well, Anacortes is having one on May 19, when the city celebrates the 125th anniversary of its incorporation. As part of the festivities, please join us at 7 p.m. Thursday, May 19 for the opening of our original new exhibit, “Anacortes at 125,” at the Anacortes Museum, 1305 Eighth St.

The exhibit, which opens on the anniversary day, details the city’s history from its boom days to today, as viewed through the lens of the city departments that have provided its citizens with both essential services like water, streets, police and fire suppression and enhancements to their quality of life such as a library, museum, and parks and recreation.

The exhibit also complements the recent publication by the Anacortes Museum of Wallie Funk’s “Pictures of the Past: Celebrating 125 Years of Anacortes History.”

Other events planned for May 19 include the installation of a restored Bill Mitchell mural of Anacortes’ first mayor, Capt. Frank V. Hogan at City Hall. The day will also feature the unveiling of special new mural of a very long serving former mayor. Come by to see who it is. Time to be announced.

Portrait of engineer Steven D. Temple and surveyors in Anacortes at the foot of O Avenue as they begin the work began to lay out a new city in 1890. Plans for the city called for wide streets befitting the dreams that Anacortes was to become the “New York of the West.”
Poetry in Anacortes History

7 p.m.—Anacortes Public Library

Local poets, historians and students are collaborating on a poetry reading and history event at the Anacortes Public Library on Wednesday, March 23 at 7 p.m.

The event will alternate between readings of historical Anacortes poems and a slideshow illustrating the historical context. There will be poet biographies from Guemes beachcomber Charlie Gant to “Ish River” explorer Robert Sund, with many other stops along the way. Student poem reciters also will be encouraged to write their own Anacortes poem in the style of or inspired by the poetry they have studied.

The project began with research on an Anacortes Poetry Timeline and a collection of historical poems that will be read at the event. Many early 20th Century poems fit into a “booster” genre of loving tribute to the beauty and personality of Anacortes. Other poems invoke a localized humor, displaying a playful sense of community.

Bret Lunsford, Anacortes Museum Educator, was inspired to begin this study by the Anacortes Music Channel, and its interpretation of local music history. “Karl Blau made the connection between songs and poems, and I realized we’d better get to work on this project,” Lunsford stated.

The success is already apparent in how the past is connecting to the present. Forty years later at our new library, original materials from the Anacortes Co-op Press are resurfacing. Bob Rose and Peter Heffelfinger -- who operated an antique printing press in the basement of the old library during the late 1970s and organized the Skagit Voices poetry series -- will discuss the process and display some of the broadsides.

And the story continues. This same vintage Chandler & Price letterpress, used by do-it-yourself printer poets way back when, is still in use by DIY musicians churning out custom record sleeves, show posters and other cultural ephemera. What the heck!

Police Chief examines old police records

During a recent meeting of the City’s Records Retention Committee, the Anacortes Police Department’s Records Services Manager Katie Ingram was concerned to learn that the Anacortes Museum held about 100 years of police records in its archives. The collection had been labeled as restricted from public release for 90 years from the latest date in each set of records.

Officer Ingram and Chief Bonnie Bowers particularly wanted to ensure that the records did not include private information, so they came in to review the contents of a dozen boxes of material. Except for one box of case reports and a set of graphic photos (which they took back to the Police Station to evaluate more closely or destroy), Chief Bowers and Officer Ingram deemed that the remaining boxes contained blotter lists and other information that was all public record.

Chief Bowers also agreed to sign a Deed of Gift for the collection, as no record of its entry was found at the museum. During the evaluation we found such nuggets as the first page of arrests in Anacortes from 1891 and a bullet recovered from the Citizens Bank robbery in 1924. We thank Chief Bowers and Officer Ingram for working with us to clarify ownership and access to this invaluable historic collection.
Owners who recently completed house histories of their homes will be presented with their official Anacortes House History Plaques during a special event at 7 p.m. May 3 at the Anacortes Museum, 1305 8th St. The event is part of the Anacortes Historic Preservation Board’s celebration of the City’s 125th anniversary and coincides with National Historic Preservation Month.

Immediately following the plaque presentation, the board will offer a free workshop on the Anacortes House History and Plaque Program to help other property owners learn about the program and how to get started researching their own historic buildings.

The houses to be recognized are former Apex Fish Cannery Office, 1605 6th St.; Morris Belle Curtis House, 404 2nd St.; Abe and Pearl Simmonds House, 1809 8th St.; and the William and Beatrice Lowman House, 701 K Ave. These homes join a dozen others that are already documented through the House History and Plaque Program. Objectives of the program include enriching the understanding of Anacortes history and identifying houses of historic interest. This program is an adjunct to and is not intended to replace the Anacortes Local Register.

More information is available by calling the museum at 293-1915 or visiting www.cityofanacortes.org/Museum/House_History_Program_2014.pdf

In the Carnegie Gallery

“1889; Blazes, Rails and the Year of Washington Statehood,” opened in February. This Legacy Washington exhibit, an educational program within the Office of Secretary of State, celebrates the biggest stories of Washington’s year of statehood. Panels cover such topics as the fires of 1889, railroads and the race to win the state capital. An original 42-star flag is a highlight of this exhibit which will run until the end of April, when the Carnegie Gallery’s new exhibit will open celebrating 125 years of Anacortes’ incorporation (see page 1).

Through mid-April, “Anacortes Presents” is showing an exhibit of toy and miniature sewing machines collected and shared by Jan Sabin, Mr. Sew-Dandy. Quilters and other stitchers will enjoy seeing tiny Pfaff, Bernina and Singer machines, plus other less known brands like Daito Denko, Romance and Rose Marie.

Volunteers in white gloves swarm Carnegie Library

Thanks to the efforts of our own museum Aide, Lea DeVere, we have eight new volunteers from the Senior Center who have donned white gloves and undertaken the enormous job of putting the Anacortes American photo negatives into archival plastic sleeves for protection. These diligent ladies (never to be called “negative volunteers”) cheerfully arrive each Tuesday and Friday to take another step toward finishing this elephantine task.

Karen Thomson was named 2015 Volunteer of the Year at the Anacortes Museum Foundation’s Holiday gathering and Annual Meeting on December 10.

Karen has been a faithful volunteer since March 2014 and last year donated almost 200 hours.

Thank you, Karen for your loyal support of our work.

Meet Barbara Bear

Welcome to Barbara Bear, Carnegie Gallery’s new weekend Docent, shown here with one of the Gallery’s mural residents, Bill Bessner.
Barbara brings her welcoming smile and cheerful disposition to work and is happy to share her deep knowledge of Anacortes. Stop in and say hello!

Maritime Heritage Center and W.T. Preston readying for spring opening

Saturday, April 2 will find the Maritime Heritage Center and W.T. Preston open to the public for the season. There is no charge to drop in to the Heritage Center to learn about the sternwheeler and local vessels such as the codfish schooner Wawona and Bijaboji, the dugout canoe Betty Lowman rowed solo to Alaska in the 1930s.

The Preston and the Heritage Center are open 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturdays and 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sundays in April, May, September and October; plus weekday hours of 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesdays through Fridays in June, July and August.

Admission to the W.T. Preston is free for Anacortes Museum Foundation members and $3-5 for non-members.

Middle School students tour Washington statehood exhibit

Thirty Anacortes Middle School students from Anne Chase Stapleton’s bloc class, along with Anne and three adult volunteers, toured the Anacortes Museum on February 25. As part of their lesson, they used the workbook provided for the 1889 Washington statehood exhibit.
